Certificate Course on Dakhni Urdu Adab

Title: Certificate Course on Dakhni Urdu Organized by the Department of Urdu

Organized by: Department of Urdu

Institution Name: M.G.V.C Arts, Commerce and Science College, Muddebihal

Duration: 32 Hours August and September

Mode: Offline/Online

Coordinator: Dr. A.A. Mulla

No. of Participants: 15

No. of BoS: 03

About the Course:

The Department of Urdu organized a Certificate Course on Dakhni Urdu, aimed at introducing students and enthusiasts to the rich linguistic, literary, and cultural heritage of Dakhni Urdu, a dialect of Urdu widely spoken in South India, especially in Hyderabad, Gulbarga, Bijapur, and surrounding areas.

Objectives of the Course:

- To familiarize students with the history and evolution of Dakhni Urdu.
- To explore the literary contributions of Dakhni poets and writers.
- To develop basic reading, writing, and speaking skills in Dakhni Urdu.
- To highlight the significance of Dakhni in the broader landscape of Urdu literature.

Course Highlights:

- Lectures by renowned scholars and Dakhni writers.
- Interactive sessions on Dakhni poetry (especially Sufi poetry).
- Audio-visual presentations and recordings of Dakhni plays and folk songs.
- Introduction to key figures such as Gangu, Khwaja Bandanawaz, Shah Miranji, and others.
- Exposure to modern Dakhni literature and popular culture (films, theatre, etc.).

Assessment and Certification:

Participants were required to attend at least 80% of the sessions and submit a short project or give a presentation in Dakhni Urdu. Successful candidates were awarded a Certificate of Completion by the department.

Conclusion:

The course received an enthusiastic response from students, scholars, and Urdu lovers. It not only revived interest in Dakhni Urdu but also strengthened regional linguistic pride. The department plans to make this a regular annual offering with advanced modules in the future.

Sources of Dakhni Urdu

Dakhni Urdu (also spelled Deccani, Dakani, Dakkhani) is a historical dialect of Urdu spoken in the Deccan region of South India. Its roots and sources are rich and diverse, shaped by centuries of cultural and linguistic interaction.

Primary Sources of Dakhni Urdu:

1. Indigenous Languages of the Deccan

- Kannada, Telugu, Marathi, Tamil
Dakhni absorbed vocabulary, idioms, and pronunciation from these regional languages due to close contact with local populations in the Deccan plateau.
Examples: "baiko" (wife – from Marathi), "sakku" (good – from Kannada)

2. Standard Urdu (Rekhta)

- Dakhni shares its structure with classical Urdu (Rekhta), especially in grammar and syntax.
- However, Dakhni developed independently before the standardization of Urdu in North India, making it one of the earliest forms of Urdu.

3. Persian and Arabic

- With the arrival of Muslim rulers in the Deccan, especially during the Bahmani and Adil Shahi dynasties, Persian became the court language.
- Dakhni adopted many Persian and Arabic loanwords through administrative and literary influence.
- Words like "ilm" (knowledge), "khuda" (God), and "adab" (respect) are examples.

4. Turkic Influence

- Turkic military and administrative elites settled in the Deccan during the Delhi Sultanate and Bahmani rule.
- Some vocabulary and cultural concepts in Dakhni have Turkic origins, though limited.

5. Sufi and Bhakti Movements

- Sufi saints in the Deccan, such as Hazrat Khwaja Bandanawaz Gesudaraz and Miranji Shamsul Ushshaq, used Dakhni for their poetic and religious messages.
- This spiritual and emotional usage helped shape Dakhni's literary style — simple, emotional, rhythmic, and metaphorical.

Head

Co-ordinator,

Internal Quality Assurance Cell

6. Migration from North India

- Many scholars, poets, and soldiers migrated from Delhi and other northern regions after events like the Timurid invasion (1398).
- These migrations helped establish a Delhi-origin dialect in the Deccan that gradually evolved into Dakhni.

Earliest Literary Records of Dakhni:

Poet/Writer	Work	Century
Nizami Bidar	Masnavi Kadam Rao Padam Rao	15th century
Khwaja Bandanawaz	Sufi prose and verses	15th century
Shah Miranji	Sufi poetry	16th century
Burhanuddin Janam	Masnavi	16th century
Ibrahim Adil Shah II	Kitab-e-Navras	17th century

Summary:

Dakhni Urdu is a syncretic and hybrid language shaped by North Indian Urdu, Persian-Arabic, local South Indian languages, and Sufi literary traditions. It is one of the earliest forms of Urdu to emerge as a medium of poetry and spiritual expression in the Indian subcontinent.

Altaf Hussain Hali

Altaf Hussain Hali (Urdu: الطاف حسین حالی – Altāf Husain Hāli; 1837 – 31 December 1914), also known as Maulana Khawaja Hali, was an Urdu poet and writer.

Early life

He was born in Panipat to Khwaja Ezad Baksh and was a descendant of Abu Ayyub al-Ansari, a close companion of the Islamic prophet Muhammad. Hali belonged to the Panipat Ansari clan, whose members included Lutfullah Khan Sadiq, the Diwan-i-Khalisa and governor of Shahjahanabad in the Mughal empire, and Sher Afgan Panipati, the governor of Multan. Hali's father died when he was nine years old and his mother suffered from dementia. He was in the care of his elder brother Khwaja Imdad Husain after the death of his parents and when he was fifteen, upon the forcing of the elder brother, married his cousin Islam-un-Nisa. Hali studied, and memorized, the Quran under Hafiz Mumtaz Husain, Arabic under Haji Ibrahim Husain and Persian under Syed Jafar Ali. Resentful of hindrance to his studies by marriage, at age seventeen he travelled to Delhi to study at the madrassa opposite Jama Masjid, which was called 'Husain Baksh ka Madrasa'.

Writing

The Indian rebellion of 1857 was an armed uprising in British India against the oppressive and destructive British colonial rule and was also popularly remembered as the 'First War of Independence'. This was a turning point in Hali's life because he was an eyewitness to the catastrophe. His family took in a widowed girl who lived with them for the rest of her life. Her plight left a deep impression on Hali and he composed two poems on the condition of women: Munajaat-e-Beva (Supplication of the Widow) and Chup ki Daad (Homage to the Silent). Syeda Saiyidain Hameed called Hali "Urdu's first feminist poet".

In 1863, in Delhi, he was appointed tutor to the children of Nawab Mustafa Khan Shefta of Jahangirabad, a position he held for eight years. In 1871, he moved to Lahore, where he was employed at the Government Book Depot from 1871 to 1874, where his task was to correct Urdu translations of English books. This brought him into contact with a wide range of literature and led to him writing the first book of literary criticism in Urdu, Muqaddama-e-Shair-o-Shairi. This was published as an introduction to his collected poems, Divan (1890) and then on its own (1893). Annemarie Schimmel called Hali the "founder of literary tradition in Urdu". He had by this time changed his takhallus from "Khasta" to "Hali", which means "contemporary" or "modern".

It will be entirely correct if the modern age of Urdu poetry is dated from the date inscribed in Musaddas. I do not have the power of expression to describe the elegance, beauty and flow of this poem. ... I am undoubtedly its inspiration. I consider this poem among those finest deeds of mine that when God asks me what did you bring with you, I will say "Nothing but that I got Hali to write the Musaddas!"

Examines the ideas central to Muhammad Iqbal's thought and life: religion, science, metaphysics and nationalism. Commonly known as the 'spiritual father of Pakistan', the philosophical and political ideas of Muhammad Iqbal shaped the face of Indian Muslim nationalism and the direction of modernist reformist Islam around the world. This volume brings together a range of prominent and emerging voices within American and European Islamic studies to share the latest developments on Iqbal's thought. They re-examine the ideas that lie at the heart of Iqbal's own thought: religion, science, metaphysics, nationalism and religious identity, and bring out many new connections between the 'Sage of the Ummah' and the greatest thinkers and ideas of European and Islamic philosophies.

AMERICAN INDIAN LINGUISTICS

KARL V. TESTER

Department of Linguistics, Harvard University Cambridge, Massachusetts

Anthropologists tend to look to American Indian linguistics for a classificatory philosopher's stone, one which will provide large-scale schemes to correspond with those derived from study of cultural traits and natural areas. Alas, the facts are yet recalcitrant. There is thus a constant temptation to exceed actual knowledge, but here the neophyte has the advantage over the scholar. The true key to American Indian languages is a willingness to accept diversity. The well-known Indo-European language family had the geographical extent its name suggests prior to New World colonization, but even the wildest scholarly speculation finds no less than four American Indian language families of Indo-European internal diversity within the confines of North America.

As a basic outline in this paper I shall use a conservative classification that is not original with me, but rather is based directly on a little-known aspect of a famous article by Sapir (78), as clarified and somewhat simplified by later work, particularly that of Haas. Within this framework I shall summarize the current state of description and comparative work for each family. Languages not securely classifiable in an internally differentiated family, either for lack of evidence or distance from obvious relatives—language isolates in the term of Haas—will be treated separately, and possible wider relationships then briefly discussed.

Space limitations have dictated a narrowly linguistic concern in this paper. Such related topics as ethnographic semantics are omitted, and the emphasis here is on the status and details of recent and current work in descriptive and historical linguistics. The same consideration plus the writer's own limitations additionally circumscribe the America of the title to America north of Mexico, although a more reasonable division in terms of relationship would include both Mexico and Central America.

In writing this paper I have incurred two debts. The first is to direct correspondents. In 1971, Kinkade (49) published a roster of linguists and anthropologists currently working on American Indian languages, containing the names of over 300 scholars. I have circularized those on the list, inquiring as to their current and recent work, and received a generous response from more than half this number. I regret the necessity for severe selection in actual literature cited, but hereby acknowledge gratefully the education received from all those kind enough to reply. Secondly, a major volume

Topic: Journalism in Present Scenario and Our Responsibilities

The contemporary landscape of journalism is defined by a rapid digital transformation, increasing audience fragmentation, and the viral spread of misinformation, challenging the industry's traditional role and business models. In this complex environment, journalists have a heightened responsibility to uphold core ethical principles and leverage new tools to serve the public interest.

Present scenario: Challenges for journalism

- Erosion of public trust. A decline in public confidence has been a significant trend, fueled by the spread of deliberately false information ("fake news"), accusations of media bias, and the use of algorithms that create echo chambers. Some political leaders and interest groups also attack the media to undermine negative coverage.
- Intense financial pressure. With declining print readership and advertising revenue shifting to digital platforms like Google and Facebook, many traditional news outlets face severe financial strain. This leads to layoffs and budget cuts that threaten in-depth, investigative reporting. Many freelance journalists are also under increasing financial pressure.
- Information overload and the rise of social media. The sheer volume of content available online makes it difficult for citizens to discern credible information from disinformation. Social media platforms have become a primary news source for many people, and their algorithms prioritize engaging, often sensational, content over factual accuracy.
- Technological disruption. The rise of artificial intelligence (AI) and deepfake technology presents both opportunities and threats. While AI can automate tasks and personalize content, it also enables the creation of more believable disinformation and raises questions about authenticity and accountability.
- Threats to journalist safety and freedom. Journalists worldwide face increased harassment, intimidation, and violence, both in person and online. In some countries, legal threats and anti-press legislation are used to silence critical reporting.

Journalists' responsibilities in the current climate

To navigate the present challenges, journalists must double down on foundational principles while also adapting to new realities. Their responsibilities include:

- Seek truth and verify. At the core of journalism is the discipline of verification. Journalists must strive for accuracy, use reliable sources, and clearly state when information cannot be corroborated. Transparency about the reporting and fact-checking process is more important than ever.
- Combat misinformation and promote media literacy. In an information-polluted ecosystem, journalists must actively debunk false claims. This involves being transparent, correcting errors promptly, and helping the public develop the critical thinking skills needed to identify and scrutinize information sources.
- Maintain independence. Journalists must resist pressure from political, corporate, and cultural interests. They must disclose potential conflicts of interest and deny favored treatment to advertisers and special interests to preserve their integrity and credibility.
