Social equality in a society is the social state of affairs where all the people in the society have equal rights under the law, including right to vote, physical security, freedom of speech. The society where there is no discrimination on the basis of caste, class, gender, language, income, health or disability (differently able). It also includes equal opportunities for education and employment. In order for a society to consider itself a part of social equality.

Our principal A.B.Kulkarni presided over the function. He says equality is equality of opportunity, "the idea that everyone has an equal chance to achieve wealth, social prestige, and power because the rules of the game, so to speak, are the same for everyone".
